Do Your Earlobes Hang Low? Rejuvenate Them Right Before Your Eyes Restylane eliminates sagging and wrinkly earlobes on men and women

Dublin, OH – March 10, 2008 – Do you have a pair of diamond stud earrings in your jewelry box that you'd love to wear but you don't because your lengthened earlobe makes them point south? You're not alone. Earlobes, just like many other parts of the body, start to sag as we age. Earlobes can lose collagen making them appear flabby or shriveled. But Dr. Carol Clinton of Timeless Skin Solutions in Dublin, Ohio says you don't have to live with sagging earlobes.

"Dermal fillers can be used for a number of skin issues including sagging earlobes," says Dr. Clinton. "There's no reason why a woman shouldn't wear her favorite earrings or enjoy an up do or a short haircut just because she doesn't like her earlobes."

Dr. Clinton has treated earlobes on both men and women with a dermal filler called Restylane. By injecting a small amount of the fluid directly into the lobe, patients can see results almost instantly.

"You will see an improved look even before you leave the office," says Dr. Clinton. "The procedure is virtually painless and results can last up to two years."

Earlobe injections typically cost $600. Contact Timeless Skin Solutions at 614-799-5100 for more information or to schedule an appointment.
